TO
THE GLORIOUS AND BEAUTIFUL SPIRIT FOR A FEW BRIEF YEARS KNOWN UPON EARTH AS PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY
THIS BOOK IS HUMBLY BUT LOVINGLY DEDICATED IN FULL CONSCIOUSNESS OF ITS IMPERFECTIONS AND SHORTCOMINGS
BUT IN THE HOPE THAT IT MAY BE OF SOME USE TO STUDENTS
OF THE GREAT POET'S WORKS

*SOME WORDS BY WAY OF APOLOGY
FOR THE BRINGING TOGETHER AND SETTING FORTH OF THIS BOOK*

THE making of a concordance is but a simple matter, needing only patience, industry and time. With the two former humble requisites I have been furnished by nature, with the latter by circumstance. If in going beyond the plain matter of a concordance, my ambition and goodwill have overlapped my ability, then I must cry pardon of my critics, if indeed critics should trouble themselves with my work, of the shortcomings of which I am but too well conscious.

For efficient aid in the transcription of about one half of the lines, I render willing and hearty thanks to Mr. Alfred Fountain, Mr. Foster Watson, Mrs. Scoffern, Mr. G. Thorn Drury, Miss M. S. Grove (her last work alas!), Mr. G. R. Tutin, Mr. F. G. Aylward, Mr. W. W. Aylward, Miss P. M. Ellis, Miss V. V. Wilson, Mr. W. Kineton Parkes, Miss E. B. Cohen, Dr. C. E. Shepherd, Miss Power, and Mr. T. Herbert Bindley, to whom also I am greatly obliged for the help he gave me in the arrangement and annotation of the slips under M. The assistance thus given I estimate to have spared me a year's work, and so to have enabled me to bring the book out thus opportunely.

To Dr. Furnivall for his ever-ready advice and assistance, and to Mr. W. M. Rossetti for his valuable suggestions and corrections, which I cannot overvalue, I beg to tender my grateful acknowledgments.

To those who would induce time to spread wide his wings, and who would drive from their spirits the cloud of minor vexations with which life is beset, I can heartily recommend the making of a concordance. The day when I began this work, six years since, seems but as yesterday.

Had I been less in love with my author, I might have spared many hundreds of references without lessening the mere usefulness of the book, and with a good chance of bettering my publisher's profits; but those who love the poet as well as I do will spare their censures on this head, and tender me instead their thanks. If my work should in any degree be esteemed of value by that small number of persons who love Shelley's Poems, I shall then feel myself more than repaid for all the labour I have bestowed upon it.

I am led to believe that there is but a very limited number of people in the world who care for Shelley's Poetry, by the fact that I never met with a single person outside the circle of professed students of it, who could lay claim to having read more than two or three of his most celebrated lyrics.

This is not so surprising when we consider that there is little enjoyment to be derived from his works by those who read as they run ; but that they afford an ever-increasing and permanent treasure of delight to those who will be at the pains to study them, may, I am quite sure, be safely affirmed.

To those who would know Shelley, apart from his earthly entanglements, I would say, cast aside the so-called biographies and study all that is worth knowing of his life, his soul's life, in his poems. Let us call to mind and well think over the pregnant words of Walt Whitman :

‘When I read the book, the biography famous,
And is this, then, (said I,) what the author calls a man's life?
And so will some one, when I am dead and gone, write my life?
(As if any man really knew aught of my life;
Why, even I myself, I often think, know little or nothing of my real life;
Only a few hints - a few diffused, faint clues and indirections,
I seek, for my own use, to trace out here.)’

Well would it be for the world if no more was known of any poet's life, except through his works, than is known of Shakespeare's; how greatly should we then be delivered from misknowing!

That this book is published in the centenary year of the poet's birth is an undesigned coincidence.

Whose merald all its air owns yet no echo Ch. 1st, iv. 31.
 And little motion in the air v. 16.
 As the pleasant air of noon Constant. 1. 2.
 Here the air is calm and fine Cycl. 47.
 Nay we are silent, and we chaw the air — 533.
 they stop and fold Their wings of braided air : Dæmon, 1. 67.
 As the wild air stirs and sways Dirge for Year, 111. 1.
 Stains the dead, blank, cold air Epigs. 92.
 (as in a fleece of snow-like air — 99.
 Breathed but of her to the enamoured air ; — 208.
 the dull cold in the froze air : — 334.
 Who from the Elysian, clear, and golden air — 427.
 Or serene morning air — 438.
 Washed by the soft blue Oceans of young air — 460.
 In the windless air Eng. Hills, 304.
 The bats are flitting—light in the grey air ; Even. Place, 1. 2.
 Fed with human fat, polluted the air : Exhortation, 1.
 With poisonous war to taint the air : Falsehood, 58.
 the light burns soft as the enkindled air ; — 80.
 And for your own take the inclement air ; Faust, 11. 102.
 To the sound of air low-breathing Fr. Pæo. Eng. 4.
 Hurling the damned into the murky air Fr. Pæus, 5.
 Of cloud which the wild tempest weaves in air Fr. Song, 2.
 And through the sunny air Ginevra, 41.
 The ripe corn under the undulating air Gish, 119.
 Trembles not in the slumbering air — 279.
 the clanging Of her wings through the wild air Hellas, 81.
 See how it trembles in the blood-red air — 341.
 That soothed the silver clouds through the deep air — 629.
 that fills the air thrillingly ; Hom. Merc. 11. 471.
 drove The living spray along the sunny air Julian, 22.
 made the air eloquent Laon, 223.
 his slaves In air, and light, and thought, — 229.
 thrilling sounds that pierced the crystal air — 1. xxv. 2.
 when in their flow Thro' the bright air — 1. lxx. 9.
 the lulling Air Of noon bade the sea, — 1. lxx. 9.
 Chain one who lvea, and breathes this boundless air — 1. lxx. 9.
 And the bright air o'er every shape did weave — 1. lxx. 9.
 And as we past thro' the calm sunny air — 1. lxx. 9.
 thro' the air Sobs were then heard, — 1. lxx. 9.
 filled the air With her strange name and mine, — 1. lxx. 9.
 the wide air pierced and rent — 1. lxx. 9.
 that filled the listening air — 1. lxx. 9.
 as sails to the dim air ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 the golden stars of the clear azure air — 1. lxx. 9.
 mixed with mine own in the tempestuous air— — 1. lxx. 9.
 soft and even the pausing air did wake — 1. lxx. 9.
 made the earth seem fire, the sea seem air — 1. lxx. 9.
 The eagle, and the fountain, and the air ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 have preyed, Till it be thin as air ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 Expiring in the frore and foggy air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Peopling with golden dreams the stagnant air — 1. lxx. 9.
 the thirsting air did claim All moisture, — 1. lxx. 9.
 in the hot silence of the air ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 the stainless air around — 1. lxx. 9.
 in distant air the murmurs die, — 1. lxx. 9.
 'mid the tumult of the battling air — 1. lxx. 9.
 —athwart the murky air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Serene is the breath of the balmy air — 1. lxx. 9.
 And mingles its swell with the moonlight air — 1. lxx. 9.
 There was a rust in the sunless air — 1. lxx. 9.
 At the cry of the air : — 1. lxx. 9.
 Till the dead air seems alive — 1. lxx. 9.
 motion-proof Against the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 The sacred hild obscures the morning air — 1. lxx. 9.
 and saw The solid air with many a ragged jaw — 1. lxx. 9.
 Which makes a thrilling vapour of the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Breathes its swift vapours to the circling air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Because the crystal silence of the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 whose swift pinnacle of dewy air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Hung in its cloud of all-sustaining air : — 1. lxx. 9.
 (Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air) — 1. lxx. 9.
 Whose branches the air plays among — 1. lxx. 9.
 Mænad-like waved his lyre in the bright air — 1. lxx. 9.
 It ever flows and falls, and breaks the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 as soft air In spring — 1. lxx. 9.
 When the tired air tread in the frozen air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Vomits smoke in the bright air — 1. lxx. 9.
 the air around them Looks radiant as the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 around a star — 1. lxx. 9.
 Of woven cloud unravel in pale air : — 1. lxx. 9.
 When there is heard thro' the dim air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Like clouds amid the yielding air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Where the air is no prism, — 1. lxx. 9.
 Laræ winged insects thro' the lampless air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Make the cold air fire ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 Realms where the air we breathe is love, — 1. lxx. 9.
 And tho' my curses thro' the pendulous air — 1. lxx. 9.
 And as thy chariot cleaves the kindling air — 1. lxx. 9.
 whose marble smiles Fill the hushed air — 1. lxx. 9.
 When work is none in the bright silent air ? — 1. lxx. 9.
 Kindling within the strings of the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 As the sharp stars pierce winter's air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Tempering the air with the air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Celestial southern pass the anynding air ; — 1. lxx. 9.
 Sleep on the powerless air ! — 1. lxx. 9.
 Snuffed the gross air — 1. lxx. 9.
 Which is twined in the sultry summer air — 1. lxx. 9.
 The scene of light, and the warm air — 1. lxx. 9.
 'Mid the azure air is islanded — 1. lxx. 9.

and the blood Gushed round its point:
as from a well Of blood and tears with ruin!
while his foal blood may boil, Or creep Never again may blood of bird or beast and the stain Of blood, from mortal steel
And there the living in the blood did writer
For the salt bitterness of blood was there;
one in the blood did lie Of three death-wounds—
from pouring human blood Forth on the earth?
the blood which flowed Over the fields, brings To the stall, red with blood;
his footsteps reel On the fresh blood—
when the streets ran With brothers' blood!
On a white horse, splashed with blood;
Trampling to a mire of blood Clothed in arms like blood and flame,
and ankle-deep in blood,
Had turned every drop of blood Blood is on the grass like dew.

to kiss the blood From these pale feet,
We had been stained with bitter blood,
Whom he galls with groans and blood,
Groans half heard, and blood untasted;
Blood, like new wine, bubbles within:
let that thou wounded brow Stream not with blood;
And self-contempt, buttner to drink than blood;
We have unlearned with blood,
Tracking their path no more by blood and groans, panic-stricken, served With blood,
the savage drinks His enemy's blood, tracks of blood Even to the forest's depth, Upraised to shed a brother's innocent blood,
the costly altars smoked With human blood,
The lion now forgoes to thirst for blood:

Ah! My blood runs cold . . . Alastor, 168.
I felt the blood Rush to my heart . . . 651.
So when I wake my blood seems liquid fire;
My blood is running up and down my veins;
and the jellied blood Runs freely thro' my veins.
It gushes to my heart Like the warm blood
The blood and life within those snowy fingers
The blood is pulsing in my frame, glowing With the unintermitted blood,
It freezes up the blood of man;
the tone Unheard but in the silence of his blood,
To feel the blood run through the veins and tingle
Their blood beats one measure, and checked the stifling blood
To thaw the six weeks' winter in our blood.
And shrieks of women whose thrill jars the blood,
When first the living blood thro' all these veins
I felt the blood that burned . . . Cenci, I. iii. 36.
The blood stood still one moment,
Even with thy breath and blood to live when in these mingling veins The blood is still,
The blood was curdled in its current;
the flow Of the blood in her own veins,
shook The listening soul in my suspended blood;
that tingle not With blood of indignation,
If envy or age had not frozen your blood,
Joy ran, as blood within a living frame,
And blood within thy labyrinthine veins
His presence flow and mingle thro' my blood
I knew it could not be My own dull blood . . . Epips 9.
And crept with the blood through every vein;
I stilled the tingling of my blood, . . . Fr. A Soul, 5.

Not gold, not blood, their altar flowers, he tortured and shed his brother's blood from innocent blood Poured on the earth,
Perchance blood need not flow,
Blood soon, . . . to shed, The free cannot forbear—
If blood be shed, 'tis but a change and choice
Than kingly slaves arrayed in gold and blood, that ye should shed The blood of Othman—
it was a place of blood, have must Even with our blood and tears,
whom they served with blood,
Was brimming with the blood of feuds forsworn
Had felt their blood upon her brow,
With a price of blood and gold—
Rest the blood that must ensue,
Blood on the earth that dimes ye bread;
lyred all thy liquid light with blood and tears,
treasures to be bought By blood or tears,
Wept tears, and blood like tears?
With blood and groans, salt-cake, and fat,
Thy throne is on blood, and thy robe is of rage;
Thou lead them not upon the paths of blood
Drench all with blood from Avon to Trent.
Whose sons are kneaded down in common blood
B thou canst see, and fire; and canst hear groans;
Through blood, and tears,
his doom is sealed in gold and blood!

From the d. storm-clouds flashes a fearful glare, whose unc— . . . Dark, dark, yet clear,
a cloud, Dark as the frown of Hell,
A shapless, dark, and rapid crowd, Dark with the rain new buds are dreaming of:
countless stars Studded heaven's dark blue vault, Cloud upon cloud, in dark and deepening mass,
that dark red smoke blotting the silver moon?
Around, the dark tide of the tempest was swelling,
When o'er the dark ether the tempest is swelling Whilst a wreath of dark vapour encircles his head.
dark lower'd the clouds on that horrible eve,
the tempest-proof Pavilions of the dark Italian air, whose dim form Bends in dark ether . . .
I'll sail on the flood of the tempest dark,
down in the dark space of interstellar air.
Which the dark shadows hide. . . .

B. Fig. (1) sad, troubled, unhappy.
Staking his very life on some dark hope,
that seemed to illumine this dark world;
Thy settled fader, Dark as it is,
make the present Dark as the future!—
Spare aught but a dark theme,
For dark and cold mortality
A smile amid dark frowns?
Of a dark and distant shore
Or charm the dark past never to have been,
Like life and fear, a dark reality
free This world from its dark slavery,
In thanks or hope for their dark lot
I might reclaim him from this dark estate.
the tempests dark and wild Which shake a dark and wild turmoil;
Thus the dark tale which history doth unfold,
a dark gulph before. The realm of a stern Ruler, Framed a dark dwelling for their homeless thought,
I must have sought dark respite from its stress the wave of life's dark stream.
despair Of human things, had made so dark and bare,
the poison clouds which rest On the dark world,
we cherish yet In this dark ruin—
Ah! it is dark with many a blazoned name
And I returned with food . . . And dark intelligence;
Fill this d. night of things with an eternal morning.
I see a dark and lengthen'd vale, which made His solitude less dark.
Now dark—now glittering—now reflecting gloom
Dark is the realm of grief.
Had left within his soul their dark unrest Plying the tumult of their dark estate his age, dark, cold, and tempest-tost a ruffling atmosphere Of dark emotion,
And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,
A dark yet mighty faith,
As soothed her own dark lot.
The gates of that dark refuge closed,
And so through this dark world they fleet Divided,
And in that dark and evil day
And the dark monk now Wraps the cowl round his brow,
the last Of peace to the dark monk's brain.
And triumphant their gleam on the d. Monk glar'd,
To death on life's dark river.
some mortal slumber, dark and deep,
(2) wicked, evil, abhorrent.
I stood beside your dark and fiery youth
She expects some happy change In his dark spirit
Men, like my father, have been dark and bloody,
By a dark secret, surer than the grave;
But who can flatter the dark spirit, must hasten thus To their dark end.
A dark continuance of the Hell within him,
the dark windings [of a] pregnant lawyer's brain,
and a dark yet sweet office.
He loosens to their dark and blustering ministries, that dark power which brings Bvill,
Upon her children's brow, a Falsehood to disarm.
So that I feared some Spirit, fell and dark,
But the dark fiend who with his iron pen,
It is the dark idolatry of self,
Its struggling fears and cares, dark Custom's brood, those dark conspirators He called:
a dying scurf of dark oppression's hell.
Dark Priests and haughty Warriors dark Terror has obeyed Your bidding—
By the dark creeds which cover with eclipse
In their own dark disguise,
As some dark Priest hales the reluctant victim
Strange, savage, ghastly, dark and execrable,
(3) of death, sad or gloomy.
Athwart what brow is that dark mantle thrown?
Breathed o'er his dark fate one melodious sigh:
Does the dark gate of death Conduct
Nor ever more offer at thy dark shrine
Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.
The tapers that did light them the dark way
Thee, light of life . . . dead, dark!
Yet tell me, dark Death, when thine empire is o'er, aye may go To the dark grave unbonoured.
The dark arrow fled in the noon.

In dreams, the golden pinioned Genii came,
 And thoughts did keep in dreams, unnatural watch at night mought in dreams
 more profound and strong Than my sweet dream;
 nor ecstasy, nor dream, heaved
 In vision or in dream, clove to my breast:
 awake in grief from some delightful dream.
 Like the bright shade of some immortal dream
 a dreams, Which hid in one dim gulph
 I know not yet, was it a dream or no.
 Was Cythna then a dream, and all my youth,
 With imagery beautiful as dream crashed, as it were in dream, scepters and crowns; Foul as in dreams' most fearful imagery
 'twas a dream divine;
 the heart repine,—Tho' 'twas a dream.—
 From mine own voice in dream, came to my bed In dreams, like that
 The change was like a dream to them;
 And violence and wrong are as a dream
 he lay As in a quiet dream— this is Paradise And not a dream.
 Like a dream's dim imagery
 A dreams has power to poison sleep;
 From the shadow of a dream!
 Eads of a disjointed dream.—
 And in his dream sat down.
 A power which comes and goes like dream,
 Thou comest as the memory of a dream,
 With the delight of a remembered dream,
 And let me read thy dream.
 The dream is told.
 It is mine other dream.
 Like one who talks of what he loves in dream.
 then fled, as thou mightest in dream.
 Is it a dream, or do I see And hear frail Helen?
 Its sails are foisted like thoughts in a dream,
 which flows, like a dream into the light.
 As one enamoured in upborne in dream
 Making the night a dream;
 More dimly than a day-appearing dream.
 He came like a dream in the dawn of life,
 The embodied vision of the brightest dream,
 I should not doubt to say it was a dream
 Not until my dream became Like a child's legend
 I half-remembered my forgotten dream.

 Our adversity a dream to pass away—
 Gives grace and truth to life's unquiet dream.
 this life's venomous dream.
 I thank thee dearest for the dream.
 Charming away its dream of pain.
 For a dream so dear as thine,
 A vain and feverish dream of sensualism?
 His life a feverish dream of stagnant woe,
 Like wrecks of childhood's sunny dream:
 (2) a reverie.
 Felt it in some wild noonday dream,
 She, in that dream of joy, dissolved away.
 (3) a memory.
 Be a dream of days forgotten long,
 (4) a phantasy, an idea.
 a dream Of youth, which night and time
 O, that the dreams Of dark magicians what'er Thy wildest dreams presented or what sweet dreams May pilot us which would fain Have waked the dream
 I struggled with that dream,
 And 'twere an innocent dream,
 a clinging dream within my brain,
 This was the tenour of my waking dream.—
 (5) illusion.
 aye, the ghost, the dream, the shade Of power,— and stem That torrent of unquiet dreams.
 From my dream of unremaining gladness;
 And we the shadows of the dream,
 Into this valley of perpetual dream,
 (6) state of quietude.
 Wakes not one ripple from its summer dream.

Evening, n. the close of the day.
Evening must usher night,
Evening came on, The beams of sunset hung
 In the light of evening,
 Bid Beatrice attend me in her chamber This evening;
 I said I would not drink this evening;
 Murdered his mother yester evening;
 When evening yields to night,
 Yet likest evening's vault that fairy Hall,

"varying glow," as summer evening casts Autumn's evening meets me soon,
 And evening's breath, wandering here and there
 From evening close to morning light, and breathing dew, And airs of evening;
 And evening airs wander upon the wave;
 And the same evening did he steal away
 Like hues and harmonies of evening—
 I rode one evening with Count Maddalo we stood Looking upon the evening
 How from their many isles in evening's gleam
 the evening was most clear And beautiful, Morn fled, noon came, e, then night descended,
 when the shades of e. lie On Earth and Ocean,
 until the shades of evening wrap Earth
 But if the morning bright as evening shone,
 The sweetness of the balmy evening
 The enthusiast hears at evening;
 Which vernal sephyras breathe in evening's ear,
 Autumn evening, and the morn
 When evening fell upon our common home,
 And the grey shades of evening
 Daily at evening Helen came Daily each evening from her home, for evening, And the power it's glimpses bring
 In morning's light, in evening's gloom,
 And oft in evening did we meet,
 And when evening descended from heaven above,
 Spanglet of light on evening's shadowy veil,
 And pallid evening twines its beaming hair a veil of light is drawn O'er evening's hills deep night Caught them ere evening— bringing, ere evening, Strange night as thick as mist On evening marabes,
 In autumn evening from a poplar tree.
 Under the evening's ever-changing glow:
 golden dawn To fairy isles of evening,
 To evening like golden evening,
 from the golden close Of evening, returned with axe and saw At evening close the star which panted In Evening for the Day,

Evening, c. adj. attr. (1) pertaining to, or seen at, evening.
 and even gloom Now evening the dark shades,
 For the uniform and lightsome evening sky.
 Or Put sudden poison in my evening drink?
 The silver lightnings Of the evening star,
 And genti of the evening breeze,
 My absent master and his evening sheep
 When west winds sigh and evening waves lap owls lit Round the evening tower,
 Which the kern evening star is shining through.
 Like even shades that o'er the mountains creep, nor though in evening dun,
 the evening sky pavilions it;
 If with mists of evening dew
 As where the evening star may walk spread From flowers half drunk with even dew,
 And when the evening star came forth
 Is borne upon the evening breeze;
 To roof the glow-worm from the evening dew.
 as gnats upon the evening gleam,
 as on the summer evening breeze,
 a jonquil when evening breezes fan it,
 The watery bow burned in the evening flame,
 (2) western = American.

Oh light us to the isles of the evening land!
 And follow Love's folding star To the Even land!

Events, n. occurrences, things done.
 When dread events are near, stir up men's minds and the store Of all events is aggregated there Mighty events are hastening to their doom!
 the events Of old and wondrous times,
 Nor the events enchain every will,
 And those events that desolate the earth
 and the store Of all events is aggregated there

Ever, adv. (1) always, perpetually, continually, invariably.
 And ever at thy season be thou free for I have loved Thee ever and thee only;
 And my heart ever gazes on the depth
 That ever led on its decaying flame.
 And did embower with leaves for ever green,
 the Port's blood, That e. beat in mystic sympathy Yet I have ever hoped you would amend, ever Beside thee like thy shadow hangs,
 In charmed sleep doth ever lie.
 diffused An ever varying glory.
 In whom love ever made Ever ever still burning, yet ever most mable:
 as ever still Longing with divided will,
 He is ever drifted on
 But our toil and our pain are for ever in vain.
 And ever as she went her light fair feet
 In circles quaint, and ever changing dance, Worlds on worlds are rolling ever and ever at this hour ever still Among Christ's flock a perilous infidel,
 But he was ever talking in such sort
 He ever communes with himself again,
 Believe that I am ever still the same But beside thee, where still my heart has e. been.
 who did ever weep Upon his enemy's heart
 my own Cythna was, Not like a child of death, among them ever;
 who ever weave Their shadows, o'er the chasm,
 The ready frauds which ever on thee wait—
 To see that anchor ever hanging,
 Have ever grieved that man should be the spoil
 And the sound of her heart that ever beat,
 His name in my ear was ever ringing,
 His form to my brain was ever clinging:
 Like the great flood to Egypt, ever be,
 Figures ever new Rise on the bubble
 At her command they ever came and went—did ever keep The tenor of her contemplations.
 And ever as she went,
 the Elysian air Which ever hung about that lady And ever are erased—but tremble ever while they were still arraying In liveries e. new,
 and kept ever green The pavement and the roof
 (2) continuously, uninterruptingly.
ever beat With sluggish surge,
ever singing, In murmurs as soft as sleep;
 For ever, as the war became more fierce
 On all the winds of heaven approaching e. floated,

And ever from that hour upon me lay
Whose vast cells The unrepining billows ever beat,
Ah me! alas, pain ever, for ever!
Ever thus we watch and wake.
Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new,
Stand ever mantling with aerial dew,
Where ever lies, on unceasing waves,
Life's ever tumultuous Ocean;
And kept for ever wet The stems
And ever down the prone vale.

(8) at any time, on any occasion, under any circumstances.
One human step alone, has ever broken
Nor wind, nor bird, The soul ever stirred; Forbidden ever to see himself as he is,
Liker than any Vandyke ever made,
Would they ever change their hue
What can ever lure Maidens to leave
You kiss me not Ever,
Too earnest and too sweet ever to be denied.
No ill may harm Thy Cythna ever—
Might not my heart its cravings ever slake?
A light around my steps which would not e. fade.
O wretched ye if ever any were
That ever soared on fancy's wildest wing!
Promising children as you ever saw—
Were as silent as ever-old Tmolus was,

(4) at any previous time or occasion.
If solitude hath ever led thy steps
Ever made us mute with wonder
The Titan looks as ever, firm, not proud,
So wild a shape Hath ever yet beheld,
If solitude hath ever led thy steps
Received more than all, it loved more than ever.
What none yet ever knew
Which to her looks had ever been betrayed,
Which ever upon mortal stream did float.

(5) at any future time.
Nor ever more offer at thy dark shrine
That if she ever have a child;
She will not ever set him free again.
Too deeply laden Ever to burthen thine.
If this sad writing thou shouldst ever see—

(6) from all time.
As it has ever done, with change and motion,
Were it as vile as it was ever spotless.
Which e, from the oppressed to the oppressors flow.
The chainless winds still come and ever came
In sacred dedication *ev*er grew:

(7) on all occasions, under all circumstances.
Your Majesty has ever interposed,
The very doubt endears My sadness ever new,
Force from force must ever flow,
Men have ever built their own small world (for ever still is it not wise to make the best of ill) others, who Is it ever by The joyless thralls were ever An hindrance to my walks

(8) for a long time, unremittingly.
but ever gazed And gazed,
For ever gaze on their own drooping eyes,

(9) from the earliest time that.
ever since a thief was set to catch a thief.
(10) freely at a time indicated.
The dead and putrid fish were ever thrown;

(11) in any way, any how, by any means.
How shall ever one like me Win thee back again?

(12) from time to time, every now and then.
And ever changing, like a joyless eye which ever there Waked faint yet thrilling sounds and ever she Added some grace

Ever, n. all time, eternity.
Lost, lost, for ever lost,
Rage and reason for ever— Mocking its moans, respond and roar for ever, which night and time have quenched for ever,
over the world wanders for ever,
into one thought—one image—yes, for ever!
thus For ever, day and night, we two were ne'er Parted,
To burst the chains which life for ever flings
As if the light of youth were not withdrawn for Forget that thou must wake for ever;
Dream that God will damn for ever;
Where waterfalls around it leap for ever,
Their food and their retreat for ever gone,
for ever Rolls its loud waters to the ocean waves,
they are lost for ever;
Hope, love, doubt, desire, which consume him for ever.
Ah woe! Alas! pain, pain ever, for ever!
No cessation! Oh! must this last for ever!
for e play A losing game into each other's hands,
like slow rain falling for ever,
First like hot gall, then dry for ever!
Out of their mossy cells for ever burst;
Of this green earth with them for ever low—
So they might live for ever in the light
Fear not the tyrants will rule for ever,
